The SEO challenge

Search engine optimisation for many organisations comes with challenges. How do you get everyone on the same page, when SEO affects so many people and departments? At ComMedia IT Solutions, we have a team of SEO consultants, analyst, and experts who are fully equipped with their knowledge and experience. We strive to offer you the finest suggestions for promoting your business worldwide. The first challenge we have seen is something which would be best described as cross functional alignment. It stems from the fact that many organisations tend to separate their functional parts into silos: marketing, HR, production, IT, etc. The SEO team tends to get put in the same silo as either marketing or IT. That isn't a bad thing. The real problem is that these separate silos, while existing within the same organisation, often don't talk to each other - and SEO, by its very nature, affects many silos beyond its own.

So how do we help clients to get the very best from SEO

In a time when the Internet is the source for most to find a product or service they need, there is no greater investment than search engine optimisation for your business. Our SEO Services will assist you in driving a beneficial SEO result.

Once a properly implemented marketing strategy is in place, your results will last a long time, giving you the peace of mind that once you're up in the rankings, your website is delivering you potential customers'. Part of the objectives of our services is to optimise your website as this is the fastest, easiest way to dissolve your competition. Fact: Web users rarely search through pages and pages of search engine listings to find your business. It's a race to the top of the listings, so who will get your potential clients' attention first?

Its simple - the more people who come to your website, the more potential customers you attract. SEO works on both a local and a national scale-dominate your local market or reach customers across the nation. We can help you expand your brand further than you could ever expect. An SEO website works like having a 24-hour marketing team dedicated to your company. Even after you lock up your office, SEO is still working. SEO is one of the most affordable and effective marketing strategies when you work with the right professionals. At ComMedia IT Solutions, we make sure you have the right SEO and design package for your company so you are not spending money on services you don't need.
